Course Description

This course is intended to provide a market-oriented framework for analyzing the major types of financial decisions made by corporations. It provides an introduction to present value techniques, capital budgeting principles and problems, and the various financial decisions of firms. After taking the course, students are expected to be able to carry out cost-benefit analysis of investment projects, and understand the mechanisms of important corporate policies such as security issuance, dividend payment, capital structure, and merger and acquisitions.

The Textbook/Main Reference

Stephen A. Ross, Randolph W. Westerfield, Jeffrey Jaffe, Joseph Lim, Ruth Tan, and Helen Wong, Corporate Finance, Asia Global Edition, McGraw-Hill Book Co.

We will release lecture materials on the Blackboard System. Lectures aim at providing the students with the fundamental theories and techniques of the subject.

Course Requirements

The course assessment scheme is arranged as follows.

Assignments: 15%

Group project: 35% in total, group presentation of work in progress in the final teaching weeks is required; group report quality accounts for 25%, and group presentation performance 10%.

Final exam: 50%

The TAs will run tutorials to discuss the course material and homework assignments. The final exam will be centrally arranged during the final exam period. The group project report will be due around December 20, 2021. In submitting a group report, group members should sign a statement that declares their workload percentage, their assessment of whether each member has fulfilled their tasks, and their willingness to be assigned the same score for the group report.
